marks:-Our colleague of the Straits Times, who appears to be justly indignant at the action of the Home Government, and who has devoted several issues of his paper to expose the great' injustice that has been perpetrated, very preperly makes certain suggestions with a view to express the great indignation and "intensely bitter dissatisfaction" felt by this and other Crown colonies at the action of the Home authorities. We fully agree with the Editor of the Straits Times, and would gladly go band-in-hand with him, although we do not believe that any further efforts will have the least effect in moving the Home Government one jot or tittle from the infiguitous course they have determined upon. By all means let the unofficial members of the Legislative Council, and the elected and nominated members of the several Municipal Boards, and every unpaid Justice of the Peace resign in a body. Neither in the Legislature nor on the Municipal Board are they of any practical use, because they are powerless either to carry or to veto any measure in opposition to the official members, however beneficial or injurious such measures may respectively be to the community at large. In fact, they are merely the Government's gratuitous advisors whose opinion is only taken into consideration when it chances to meet the .views of the officials. We have no hesitation in advocating the course suggested by our Singapore contemporary. Let the world know that for all practical purposes the inhabitants of these settlements are unrepresented in the Legislature. What has been doled out to us hitherto with such a great flourish of trumpets is but the shadow and not the substance of popular representation. If the gentlemen who now hold the several posts referred to will be consistent, straightforward and independent, they will let Lord Knutsford know that they decline further to lend themselves to the perpetration of what is but a "fraud. delusion and a snare."

MR. Herbert Gladstone has succeeded obtaining authority for a return which will have unusual interest. It will set forth the number of Her Majesty's ships that have been lost otherwise than in accidents since 1840, giving in each case the date, locality, and occasion of the loss, a description of the ship, and an abstract of the finding of the official court of inquiry. M Gladstone wanted to have the record carried back to 1815, but this was regarded at the Admiralty as too remote a date, and the return will be limited to half a century.

Woollen cloth was first made in England in the year 1331, though it was known in Oriental countries since time out of memory; it was neither dyed nor dressed in England until the year 1667. The facts of the affair are as follows: a stove-pipe leading from the second to the third floor of the premises occupied by Mr. Conrad Schwencke, at No. 8 Queen's Road Central, became over-heated and caused a beam of the third floor to smoulder, the smoke issuing through the chincks in the floor; and a heathen acreant seeing it, rushed out on the public street and yelled "fire!" at the top of his voice An Indian constable heard it and made a dash for the alarm bell and thus set the brigade in motion. Before the latter got to the scene of action the fire (?) was put out by the occupants of the house, who tore up a few pieces of planking and poured water on the beam. The house in question is the property of Messrs. D. R. Sassoon, Sons & Co. and is fully insured. The damage done probably amounts to one dollar and ninety-nine contsand a decimal, but that doesn't matter.

THE Graydon gun, which has been the subject of discussion in England lately, is, says Service paper, looked upon with some suspicion by artillery officers. It is true that the gun if successful, will almost revolutionise modern warfare, as no ship and no fort can withstand the effect of 600 lb. of dynamite. It is necessary, however, to receive with extreme caution, no only Yankee yarns, but Yankee inventions also. The Gradon shell has so far only been tested on a very small scale, the largest dynamite charge experimented with being only 27 lbs. There is some difference between a charge of 21 lbs, and one of the boasted 600 lbs., and we venture to doubt whether anything approaching to the quantity of dynamite is likely to be safely propelled from a gun, leither by compressed air or any other agency. The air-gun has certainly been manufactured, and some trials will shortly be made with it in England, but unt these experiments have at least been attempted "Remarkable, remarkable! THE CHINESE INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED (IN LIQUIDATION.)

Subjoined we give a full report of the meeting of the above named Company held yesterday :--A general meeting of shareholders in the Chinese Insurance Company, Limited, in liquidation, was held at the Head Office of the Company (Messrs. Melchers & Co.'s) yesterday afternoon, when the liquidators laid before the shareholders the account showing their acts and dealings, and the manner in which the winding up had hitherto been conducted. There were present Messrs. F. Dodwell (Chairman), S. C. Michaelsen, E. Georg, J. Macichose, T. I Rose, E. B. Jorey, J. Goosmann, G. Von Wille, several Chinese shareholders and M. Harms (Secretary).

The Chairman said-The report and accounts having been in your hands for some little time I shall with your permission take them as read. In coming before you with their report of the progress of the winding up during the past year, the liquidators exceedingly regret that the results continue so unsatisfactory, but they would be doing less than their duty did they endeavour to put matters before you in any more favourable. light than the facts warrant. As the accounts show, and the report points out, the actual losses paid out during last year are comparatively small. some $2,100 only, being the balance between $39,000 losses paid and recoveries $37,000, which of course represents a great deal of labour on the part of the liquidators in London. However, the drain of liquidation expenses must be taken into account. It is true that in nearly every instance we are reinsured, but as you are all aware underwriting of late has resulted in heavy losses, culminating in many cases in failure to meet engagements, and we regret to say that we have been unfortunate in this respect as regards some of our reinsurers, to which we have before alluded. We have, therefore, but little hope of being able to complete the liquidation without almost entirely exhausting the called up capital, of which about $40,000 only remained at the close of last year, and in this connection the liquidators may congratulate themselves and the shareholders, if indeed congratulation can be allowed in such a dreary matter, that they were not to be tem ted last year by sanguine estimates to make any repayment of capital, which would, as events recalled. The report makes mention of a scheme for shortening the process of winding up, which the liquidators are considering, and we propose to take advantage of your presence here to-day to ask you to remain behind at the close of the meeting for private discussion, when we will lay before you details of the matter. You will probably agree with us, it would be unwise to publicly discuss these, as such a course might prejudice the negotiations. Before proposing the adoption of the report and accounts as presented, I shall be glad to answer any questions shareholders may have to put at this

There being no questions, the Chairman proposed the adoption of the report and accounts. Mr. Jorey seconded, and the motion was unanimously carried.

This concluded the business of the public meeting, which was followed by a private consultation between the liquidators and shareholders as to the most expeditious manner of bringing the winding up to a satisfactory conclu-

The chief officer grumbled about the manner in which the work was done, and the boatswain replied "You speak to me as if I was an ordinary scaman." The defendant then caught complainant by the nose and throat and held him down on his knees for nearly a minute, until he was black in the face, and then with an oath knocked him down and said "I will do for you this time." The defendant struck the complainant several times violently on the head, and knocked him on the deck. Complainant got up and the defendant said " Have you had enough?" The complainant said "Yes, I've had enough," and the defendant again caught him and bumped his head on the deck several times. The complainant bled from the right car and throat. By the defendant—You struck the complainant twice on the ear whilst he was lying on the deck. You got bim down three times.

Charles Giffard, ordinary senman, corroborated the last witness, and in reply to the defendant said-You said you would do for him, when the complainant was down the second time.

The defendant said the complainant had given him a lot of trouble during the three months he had been on board the steamer. Yesterday morning the boatswain was tumbling about the poop under the influence of liquor. He called him down and told him to go forward, but he refused and went back. He again called the complainant down, and losing his temper he caught him by the throat and gave him a slap on the ear. That was all he to-morrow, in support of the strikers at Cardiff, MADAME PATEY'S CONCERT We feel sure that not only Madame Patey, but also the whole of her select concert company must have been highly gratified at the reception which they received from their nudience at the City: Hall last night. PARIS, February 19th. The Empress Frederick is staying a week in Paris. It is believed the visit is connected with Emperor William's desire to bring about an rapprochement with France.

LONDON, February 20th. In the House of Commons Sir John Gorst, replying to a question, said a further Commission of Enquiry into the question of Indian factory labour was not intended at present, as the Government proposed to legislate upon the whole information available. Mr. Hanhury's motion, which was brought forward in the House of Commons last night, for improving the position of the soldiers of our Army, was withdrawn after a long debate Sir E. Hamley said he regretted that the commercial prosperity of the country had caused a diminution in the number of recruits. Regarding the physical competency of the men, he declared that the service had touched bottom. Mr. Stanhope rebutted the complaints made regarding pay, accommodation, and rations of the Army, and said it was not necessary to offer any greater inducements to recruits to enlist. He then said it had been resolved to appoint a committee to consider the question of deferred pay, short service, the arming of coaling stations, and the addition of mo ern guns to our fortresses, some of which, abroad, had been almost completed. Mr. Stanhope said that he intended to propose a large increase in garrison artillery:

CAIRO, February 31st. Prior to the occupation of Tokar by the Egyp tian forces, an action was fought near Afafite, which lasted one hour and a quarter. Osman Digna's force, which is estimated to have numbered two thousand, made a furious attack on the Egyptians when occupying the ruins and buildings of the town, and most severe hand-tohand fighting ensued. The cavalry charged and broke the enemy, who finally were routed, and left seven hundred dead round their position. Captain H. L. Barrow, of the South Lancashire Regiment, was killed, and Captain J. R. Beech. of the 20th Hussars, was wounded. Four Egyptian officers were severely wounded, and twelve men were killed and forty-two wounded.

General Grenfell telegraphs that Captain Barrow fell while performing his duties in a most gallant manner. All Osman Digna's staff of Emirs were killed, whilst Osman himself watched the fight from a distance, and took to flight with thirty of his followers as soon as he saw that defeat was inevitable. Two cannons and quantities of ammunition and weapons were captured by the Egyptians, and some hundreds of Arabs submitted.

WASHINGTON, February 22nd. The report of the Coinage Committee of the louse of Representatives argues that unlimited coinage would only have the effect of absorbing the surplus silver. It also dwells upon the unchanged monetary situation since the passage of the present silver law, which the report says is quite adequate.

Secretary Foster has been interviewed by a member of the press, and said it was his ambition to continue the policy of his predecessor, Mr. Windom, for the present, and it was improbable he would change it. Free coinage he considered to be detrimental to commerce.

In the House of Commons last night Sin James Fergusson, in reply to a question, said it had not been positively decided to permanently occupy Tokar and Handbub with Egyptian troops, but it was probable that they would be retained there for some time, Sir James fully explained the reasons for the occupation, which he said involved no advance into the interior.

The debate on the Army estimates continues in the House of Commons. Lord Hartington last night asked what had been done to execute the recommendations of his commission. Stanhope, in reply, said that a committee of the mittee of the highest Naval and Military officers had also been formed to deal with matters in detail. He further stated that he was unable to state what course would be pursued in the event of the office of Commander-in-Chief becoming vacant. He was not prepared to appoint a Chief of Staff, but arrangements would be made to increase the responsibility of the Adjutant-General of the Army. Regarding general military administration, it was intended to constitute a Promotion Board of five Generals, who would be entirely independent of the War Office and the Commander-in-Chief.

THE CHINESE CLERK.

The essential point of difference between the life of the Chinese mercantile clerk and that of his European confrire is that he lives on the business premises. He usually has leave to return home to visit his wife and family about three times a month, on which occasions he stops away a day and night. The rest of his life is with the exception of occasional outings on business affiirs, or to attend marriages, funerals or other functions, spent entirely in the "general" office with his fellow-clerks. It is here that he sleeps, performs his scanty ablutions, has his head shaved, eats, lounges, smokes receives his friends, reads his paper or novel, and finally works. When the door is closed for the night, about it o'clock, the servants of the establishment bring in and set up each man's wooden trestle-bed, and unroll his bed coverings, which are again rolled up and stowed away in the morning. His evening toilette is quickly made. as it merely consists in stripping, placing the garments on the top of the coverlet (of course we are speaking of winter), and slipping into bed whence, after arranging his tail soft that I sha'l fall over the pillow, he soon drops off to sleep, and susually, after a minute or two, proves his undonsciousness by loud and continued snoring. In winter this class of Chinese are not very early risers, the clerks slipping into their clothes about 7.30 or 8 o'clock. Their morring toilette is not much more extensive than the evening. Taking it in turns they coil their tails round their heads, half open the necks of their upper-garments, or sometimes strip to solu tering, and eric ation, wash their faces, the waist, and with a great deal of puffing, necks, and hands in the little bright copper basinfull of hot water which the servants or the apprentice has brought in. Further and perfect'y sufficient hot-baths may be had at the public bath-houses for 7 cash and upwards, according to the class; but such extraluxury is purely a matter of individual taste. Some Chinese declare that it would hurt their health to take such baths, and remain for ever unwashed, while, others, including even coolies, make a point of taking regular baths, and are wonderfully clean and sweet by comparison. One burber u ually serves the whole establishment, and periodically there is a grand head-shaving and brushing-out of tails. The clerk, as indeed almost all other Chinamen, wears a good deal of false hair, which is most artistically plaited in with the rest, by the dest-singered barber. En passant we may remark that the latter, like his foreign brethren, owes a good deal of his importance to his entertaining powers, gossip and scandal-mongering being his forte
